

I compose portrait photographs that I make with a digital camera. I make a print of each image on paper I stain with botanicals. I place the picture in a small container and freeze it in water with plants and other substances. While the items congeal, I apply gel food color with a syringe, and when everything is icy, I photograph it.